Poetical.

THE MAIZE.

BY FOSDICK.

Afar in the forest the rude cabins rise,
And send up their pillars of smoke,
And the tops of their columns are lost in the skies,
O'er the heads of the cloud-kissing oak;
Near the skirt of the grove where the sturdy oak swings
The ax till the giant sways,
And the echo repeats every blow as it rings,
Shoots the green and the glorious maize.

There buds of the buckeye in spring are the first,
And the willow's golden hair then appears,
And snowy the cups of the dogwood that burst
By the red bud, with pink-tinted tears;
And striped the bars which the poppy holds up,
For the dew and the sun's yellow rays,
And the brown is the pawpaw's shade-blossoming cup,
In the woods near the sun-loving maize.

When through the dark soil the bright steel of the plow
Turns the mole from its unbroken bed,
The plowman is cheered by the finch on the bough,
And the blackbird doth follow his tread,
And idle, afar on the landscape descried,
The deep-lowing kine slowly graze,
And nibbling the grass on the sunny hillside,
Are the sheep hedged away from the maize.

With spring-time and culture in martial array
It waves its green broadswords on high
And fights with the gale in a fluttering fray,
And the sunbeams which fall from the sky.
It strikes its green blades at the zephyrs at noon,
And at night at the swift flying rays;
[illegible] through the darkness the beams of the moon,
Through the spears and the flags of the maize.

When the summer is fierce still its banners are green,
Each warrior's long beard groweth red;
His emerald-bright sword is sharp-pointed and keen,
And golden his tasseled plumed head.
As a host of armed knights set a monarch at naught,
They defy the day-god to his gaze,
And, revived every morn from the battle that's fought,
Fresh stand the green ranks of the maize.

AN INVITATION.

Come into the garden sweet,
At dawn of day, at dawn of day;
For love has the key of the postern gate;
Make no delay! Make no delay!

Here's beds of roses white and red,
Where softly shall you fare,
Here's crowds of yellow marigolds
To deck your shining hair.

Here's meadow lawns and grassy plots,
Where dainty feet may stray,
Here's doves to coo, and birds to sing
Love's tender roundelay.

Here's peaches from the southern wall,
O sweetheart, taste and try,
Here's arbors green and trellises
To kiss and no one by.

And all these things await you, love,
At dawn of day, at dawn of day;
For love is here with song and lute,
Make no delay! Make no delay!

HEDGEROW'S SCHOOL.

Why It Had Been a Disgrace to the Village

ITS REFORMATION BY A NOBLE YOUNG WOMAN.

The village school of Hedgerow had long been a disgrace and a pain to the place. One or two bad boys in it had demoralized it to such a degree that the school committee had set over it a hard-handed teacher, who was supposed to be strong enough physically, and of sufficiently indomitable will to reduce the boys to order, but the plan had failed. His unsympathizing and harsh measures only intensified the bad spirit that had taken possession of the school, and master after master had come and gone away discouraged. It had never occurred to the school committee to oppose this evil by other than harsh measures, and we may suppose, without being told, that there was no great elevation of ideas in the place, since there was not sufficient good influence in the homes to send better subjects to the school. At any rate, the kind of masters that had been set over them to rule them, had only made them worse.

Miss Helen, was the daughter of a farmer of the place. She had been sent away when quite a child, on the death of her mother, to the care of an aunt, who was kind and wise, and sent her to a good school, and supplemented the school with the most benign of home influences. When Miss Helen came home at 18 to keep her father's home, she was as lovely a thing to look upon as this world could show, and the outward was but a transcript of the inner woman. She found two brothers, somewhat younger than herself, one of whom was still at school. She heard the whole history from him of the brutal manner of most of the boys, and of the various young men who had tried in vain to harmonize and to teach them. Her father was a good man but had not much education. He had kept the boys by him and done the best he could for them, with the help of an old family servant, who had been in the family ever since his marriage, and loved the children of her mistress. To his astonishment, one day, Miss Helen told her father that she wanted to keep the village school, if she could get some boys as well as girls to go to it, for she had learned that all the girls had dropped out of it, and walked quite a distance to attend an old academy. Her father assured her that it was an impossibility, but Miss Helen had been preparing herself for two or three years to keep school, and she was not easily bent from her purpose, which was a very definite one, and not taken up lightly or for show. The neighbors were very kind in their welcome of her, for they esteemed her mother—and then it would have been impossible not to admire such a lovely specimen of womanhood. Miss Helen was as modest as she was beautiful, but she immediately mentioned her wish to her new friends, and, although they discouraged her at first from what they thought would be so hopeless a task, the young girls were attracted and begged to be allowed to go to her school. It was not long before she carried her point with her father, and the school committee was glad enough to have any experiment tried, though it had not much faith in her success.

Hedgerow was in a low country. The highest hill in the neighborhood was only called a hill because the rest of the country was so very flat. A pretty little river wound through it, and many beautiful elms grew in the meadow land, and woods came very near the village on one side. It was a very pretty place, and Miss Helen who had long lived in the city was delighted with it. It was named, doubtless, from the hedges of intertwined clematis and glycine that separated the fields and meadows, and were often transplanted to the fields and gardens. One of these hedges separated her father's garden from the meadow, and she may, perhaps, have carried the memory of it in her heart, although it seemed near to her; but childhood retains the fragrance of such natural beauties in its heart, and probably her's did; for one of her peculiar tastes was for the scenery of the world, and her aunt had presented her with a stereoptican when she returned home, knowing that nothing would give so much pleasure to Miss Helen as a gift by whose use she could give pleasure to others. Miss Helen's fertile brain and kind heart—the latter, indeed, was the inspirer of her fertile brain—very soon found a plan by which she thought she could tame the bad boys of the place. Her brother, who belonged to the school, felt quite anxious on the morning when she first presented herself with the prudential committeeman who was to introduce her, but she begged him not to say one word about her, and he had kept out of the way of the boys since the acceptance of her position was known, as far as he could do so. She had not told even him what she was going to do, so he was quite astonished when he entered the schoolroom to find his sister's reception there. Miss Helen was already known by sight to many of the boys, and the girls who sat on one side of the room were quite enthusiastic about her They had become a good deal acquainted with her, and she had told them from the beginning, that if they would do as she wished them to do she was not afraid of having any trouble with the boys. Indeed, she had said a good deal to them of how much the behavior of the boys depended upon the behavior of the girls they knew and went to school with. In the talks they had had with Miss Helen those girls gained many new ideas, and looked upon their duties in life with very different eyes from those with which they had had hitherto looked forward. They had lived in the pretty valley without thinking much about it, but Miss Helen since her return had visited every corner of it and had pointed out to them a thousand beauties that had never attracted their attention. They followed her everywhere, and were wholly attracted and waked up by her. There was one boy of whom Miss Helen had frequently been warned, and when she sat down in her chair on the platform, she was very sure that he must be the one, for a more lowering, brutal face she had never yet seen. He evidently had come to school that day with the intention of making trouble, if one could judge of intention by the expression of a boy's face. The school committeeman had motioned to the to pupils rise when he brought in Miss Helen, and as soon as he had introduced her, he motioned to them to sit when she did, and, without making any remark, bowed to her and left the room.

A death-like silence prevailed, broken at last by Miss Helen's pleasant voice, whose cheerful tones could hardly fail to put every one at ease. "The first thing I must do," she said, "and to do that we will have a little talk, and then decide what to do in they way of study. I do not know what you have been studying. I thought I should prefer to have you tell me yourselves. When I left Bostan, a kind friend gave me a fine stereopticon, for she knew I had collected a great many photographs of the scenery of different parts of the world, and thought I should like to show them to my friends. I have brought a favorite set of them with me this morning Is there any one here who has heard of the Yosemite valley?"

Several hands went up. Miss Helen asked one of the girls who held up her hand, and who looked very intelligent, to point out on the wall map the location of the Yosemite Valley."

"Did any one ever see a very high mountain?"

No one had.

"Neither have I, but I have thought so much about them that I fancy I can imagine one. No! I do not believe I can, either, but these photographs, when thrown upon the stereopticon, must give a pretty good idea of one. "Willie," she said to her brother, "will you take the sheet that is folded there and stretch it across that side of the room?" pointing to the side opposite the windows behind the platform on which she sat. "You will find nails all ready for the rings. And I think you are the tallest young man here," she said to the dark-browed youth that sat on the front seat, "will you be good enough to help my brother?"

The boy started to his feet, evidently being astonished at being so courteously called upon, and stammered out "Yes, ma'am."

A few giggles from the other boys ran the risk of disconcerting him, but, when Miss Helen looked at them with surprise, they were immediately hushed. When the sheet was hung and properly stretched, and fastened by Miss Helen's direction, she drew a small lantern from her satchel and asked the boys to please to close the shutters of the room, while she went behind the curtain and lighted the lamp. The children began to stir and to talk a little.

Miss Helen said: "I will tell you the height of each of the rocks and cliffs I am going to show you, and if you have slates and pencils in your desks, please take them out, so that you can put down the figures, for you will be puzzled to remember them, after you have seen two or three of them, and I hope there will be no talking while I show them, for some of you might be prevented from hearing what I shall have to say about them"

When the slates were all taken out, she suddenly threw the Captain upon the sheet, at which there was an involuntary and an irrepressible exclamation from all present combined. The next moment the silence was quite as striking. "Thank you," she said, "I do not wonder you were startled. I never saw it so well displayed myself." She then told them how many feet high the Captain was, and compared it with the steeple of the village church, which was certainly a very tall one. The Captain was five times as high, and the steeple was 400 feet.

Next came the waterfall of two thousand feet, then the bridal veil, the cathedral spires, and whole succession of wonderful heights. Two hours passed away before they realized the flight of time. Then "thank you! thank you!" was echoed from all sides. The lamp was extinguished and the shutters opened, and Miss Helen proposed a recess for all, that the room might be aired and the luncheon eaten.

"I will walk out with you, girls," she said. "We will go to the woods and eat our luncheons under the trees, and the boys can have a good scamper to refresh themselves. The boys will please to pass out first, quietly."

They did so, and after recess they came back as quietly to the sound of Miss Helen's bell. When all were in their seats again, she asked them to write each a description of the Yosemite valley as they had seen it and heard it described, by which she should know how well they could spell and write and express themselves in English. "Then," she added, "we shall have had a geography lesson, a spelling lesson, a writing lesson and a lesson in composition."

All went happily to work, and, when the hour of dismissal came, she requested them to leave their slates upon their desks, each with their name written in full.

It was a wonderful morning for the Hedgerow village school. In the afternoon they found a pretty manuscript book on each desk, into which they were requested to copy their corrected compositions. Some had written a good deal, some very little, but those who had written little had not interrupted the others, and all were astonished at their own good behavior, but it had seemed to them that they could not help it in the presence of the beautiful Miss Helen, whom they, with one accord, admired so much. The curtain was left suspened for other days, and Miss Helen had many similar lessons upon it, and strange to say, she had so many entertaining lessons, upon so many different subjects, that the scholars could not find any time for bad behavior. Even the "bad boy," as he had been called, always behaved well to Miss Helen and would have knocked down any other boy who did not. It was a new kind of school keeping, such as they had never imagined, and, though Miss Helen knew how to give hard tasks when such were necessary for their improvement, she had to have no penalties for neglected lessons, for none were neglected.

Among other things, she gave lessons about flowers, of which she was very fond, and which she sought in the hedges and meadows. Soon she found the school room charmingly decorated with vines and wild flowers, and when it was seen that she carefully planted and tended every root of the vine or flower that she found among their decorations, making a pretty border round the house and training the vines over the windows, her scholars began to seek the hedges and meadows for them, and to bring not only the plants, but the very soil they grew in into the hitherto bare school yard. Before the summer was over it was transformed into a lovely school garden in which everything that grew in the neighborhod was represented.

One day she exclaimed at home: "If I only had a piano at the school room, I would teach them all to sing!"

A week from that day she entered the school room a little before the hour, and there stood a piano, with a note upon it to "Miss Helen Loring, the gift of the village of Hedgerow." Her wish had been repeated by one of the friends who had heard it, and who had immediately drawn up a paper with that remark for a heading, and canvassed the village with it. Every one who was asked subscribed something, and now Miss Helen, who was a rare singer, taught beautiful hymns and songs to her pupils, and trained them carefully besides in the elements of music, so that, in the course of time, the church music showed the effects of it, and Miss Helen was asked to head the choir on Sundays, and all the countryside came to listen to her glorious voice. It was at this period that I first saw Miss Helen and learned her history. When I had visited it, previously to my taking up my residence in it, Miss Helen was often spoken of, and I then learned that she was the village schoolmistress, but now, being part and parcel of the place, and in a responsible position, I made it a point to learn all that was known about her. She is now Mrs. Helen ——, for I thought it was time for her school labors to cease, after she had transformed a whole village. It was some time before I could persuade her she could do as much good in another sphere; indeed, I had to wait two years, for I could not tear her from the school till she left it provided with good globes and apparatus for instruction in physics, which interested her so much that she was sure the study would interest other young people. The universe was so glorious and beautiful to her that she wanted all her scholars to enjoy it as she did, and that they could not do without knowing as much as she did about it.

If it were not for my care she would have as much to do now as when she kept the Hedgerow school, for all the inhabitants think she knows best about everything, and wish to consult her about all their affairs, great and small. I insist upon some of those requisitions being turned over to me, although I know that the anxious inquirers would be far from satisfied if they did not know she was in all my counsels, and that I think as much of her opinion about everything as they do. The school is still her pet care. It is now kept by another young lady carefully trained by her.

Profit, $1,200.

"To sum it up, six long years of bed-ridden sickness, costing $200 per year, total $1,200—all of this expense was stopped by three bottles of Hop Bitters taken by my wife. She has done her own housework for a year since, without the loss of a day, and I want everybody to know it for their benefit.

The Armed Forces of Europe.

In Germany, Austria, France, Russia and Italy every male adult capable of bearing arms is liable to military service. In Germany the liability extends over twenty five years, from seventeen to forty-two, and includes three years' active service in the standing army, four years in the first reserve, five years in the second reserve, and thirteen years in the third reserve. In France and Russia the liability extends over twenty years, in Italy over nineteen, and in Austria over twelve years. Russia exacts six years active service from her recruits, Italy eight years and Austria three. The following is a statement of the standing armies of the several countries at the close of 1879, exclusive of the last classes of reserve:

Germany—Peace footing, 420,000 men; war footing, 1,300,000 men.

France—Peace footing, 502,000 men; war footing, 1,349,000 men.

Russia—Peace footing, 502,000 men; war footing, 2,190,000 men.

Italy—Peace footing, 189,000 men; war footing, 333,000 men.

Austria—Peace footing, 267,000 men; war footing, 773,000 men.

Fifteen.

POSITION I.

1-2-3-4—This is the solved position.
5-6-7-8—Move (1) 12 down, (2) 9-10-11.
9-10-11-12—Right,(3) 13 up,(4) 12-15-14 left,
13-14-15—(5) 11 down, (5) 13-9-10 right.
(7) 13 left. The board now stands thus:

POSITION II.

1-2-3-4 This is the solvable position.
5-6-7-8 There are six possible orders
13 9 10 of the three numbers 13, 14,
14 15-12-11 15, viz.

(a) 13-14-15, solved.
(b) 13-15-14, insolvable.
(c) 14-13-15, insolvable.
(d) 14-15-13, solvable.
(e) 15-13-14, solvable.
(f) 15-14-13, insolvable.

The first is solved; the fourth and fifth are solvable, because they can each be reduced to position ii; the other three are insolvable because they cannot any of them be reduced to position ii; (a) is thus reducible as we have seen; (b) is reducible to (e) and to (f); (c) to (b) and to (f); (d) to (a) and to (e); (e) to (a) and to (d); (f) to (b) and to (e).

Let us take (e) for example.

POSITION III—SOLUTION.

1-2-3-4—Move (1) 12 down, (2) 9-10-11 right.
5-6-7-8—(3) 15 up, (4) 12-14-13 left, (5) 11 down.
9-10-11-12—(6) 15-9-10 right, (7) 13 up, (8) 14 left, (9) 15 down.
15-13-14.

The board is now in position ii, the solvable position. The succeeding moves are obvious enough: (14) 13 right, (15) 14 up, (16) 11-12-15 left, (17) down, (18) 14-13-9 right (19) 15 up, (20) 10-11-12 left, (21) 9 down, (22) 15-14-13 right, (23) 12 up, (24) 9-10-11 left, (25) 13 down, (26) 12-15-14 right, (27) 11 up, (28) 13-9-10 left, (29) 14 down, (30) 11-12-15 right, (31) 10 up, (32) 14-13-9 left, (33) 15 down, (34) 10-11-12 right, (35) 9 up, (36) 15-14-13 left.

The board is now in position i. The process may be shortened, but only at the expense of obscuring the principle. The question of solvability or insolvability is confined to the lower left hand corner of four squares. Of course the principle I have endeavored to illustrate applies equally to combinations of any other three consecutively numbered blocks, as 1-2-3, 1-3-2, &c. I have not seen the authentic puzzle, but understand that the problem requires the solution to be in position i.

POSITION IV.

9-5-1 If the problem allows the solu-
13-10-6-2 to be in the following form,
14-11-7-3 then it is solvable (to position i
15-12-8-4 or position iv) for any of the six orders.

Take (b) for example.

Move [1] 4-8-12 down, [2] 1-2-3 right, [3] 13-9-5 up, [4] 12-14-15 left, [5] 3-4-8 down, [6] 1-2 right, [7] 14-10-6 up, [8] 8-12 left, [9] 2-3-4 down, [10] 5-6-1 right, [11] 13-9 up, [12] 11-14 left, [13] 6-7 down, [14] 9-5 right. The board is now in position iv.

To get back to position i, move [1] 5-9 left, [2] 7-6 up, [3] 14-11 right, [4] 9-13 down, [5] 1-6-5 left, [6] 4-3-2 up, [7] 12-8 right, [8] 6-10-14 down, [9] 2-1 left, [10] 8-4-3 up, [11] 15-14-12 right, [12] 5-9-13 down, [13] 3-2-1 left, [14] 12-8-4 up. There are other ways also.

Again take (f.) Move [1] 12 down, [2] 9-10-11 right, [3] 15 up, [4] 12-13-14 left, [5] 11 down, [6] 15-9-10 right, [7] 14 up, [8] 15 down, [9] 14 right, [10] 13 up, [11] 15 left, [12] 14 down. This results in order [b], whence the moves are the fourteen given above. Obviously, the process might be much abbreviated by an independent solution, but I prefer to convert convertible terms rather than to multiply differences.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Friday, April 16, 1880.

The Clearfield strikers are still out.

The Curtin-Yocum contest still is undecided.

Nebraska and Iowa have declared for Tilden and will send delegations to the National Convention instructed for him.

The Supervisor of Census has not yet been confirmed for this district. We still hope that John M. Clark will receive the appointment.

Allegheny, Venango, Erie, Beaver, Lawrence, Westmoreland and Greene counties will send Tilden delegations to the Democratic State Convention.

There is a strong opposition to Tilden in New York State. If nominated, he will have difficulty in carrying the State.

Hart, the Boston colored boy, won the race for the O'Leary belt in New York last week, his score being 565 miles. He realized for his week's work over $17,000.

It is said that a corner has been made in the opium trade, and that owing to the failure of the poppy crop the price this year will go up to an enormous figure. This drug comes from Turkish Asia.

Francis Murphy, the temperance lecturer has been presented with an elegant residence in Philadelphia by the Young Men's Christian Association.

Congressman Springer, of Illinois, chairman of the House committee, while in New York, had an interview with Tilden. Springer says Tilden is a candidate for the Presidency, and expects to be nominated. He feels assured he can carry New York city against Grant or anybody else.

No convention, whether State, county, township, school district or hamlet, has yet said Hayes. Why this arctic silence? Why this frozenness toward the man who melted and wept for the woes of the poor negro when he found out that he was elected? Not even a colored convention can be got together to say for him a word of honor. Such is the forlorness of fraud found out.

A colored cadet at West Point, named Whittaker, was found one morning last week in his room, bound and gagged, both ears slit, a bruise on the head and hand. He said that three masked men had done it in the night. There was suspicion that he had done it himself to elicit sympathy for him, as he stood low in his class. This can hardly be however. The matter is being investigated. Mr. Voorhees said in Congress the other day that if West Point could not be civilized it had better be abolished.

The circular of the mercantile agency of R. G. Dun & Co., for the first quarter of 1880 is very encouraging. It says:

The failures for the first quarter of the present year, number only 1,432, with liabilities of only $12,777,074. These figures are exceptionally small, and show a decrease in the number of casualties of nearly one-half, as compared with the first quarter of any previous year since 1874. The liabilities are less than they were ever before reported in any quarter since the commencement of the publication of Quarterly Returns. It is a fact full of significance that the indebtedness of failed parties, in the first three months of the present year, do not equal one fourth of the sum to which they amounted in any first quarter in the last preceding six years. As time progresses, the figures relating to failures seem to indicate a steady continuance of favorable conditions for the trade of the country.

CAMPAIGN THUNDER.

The Gazette & Bulletin fired off its first campaign squib on Wednesday in the shape of a column article on the terrible Democracy. This indicates to a certain extent what the tactics of the average organ will be from now until the fall election.

The Gazette & Bulletin has evidently been suffering from nightmare. It sees all sorts of things flying around. Just listen:

"A return to Democratic misrule means a revival of all the sectional bickerings of the period preceding the war; it means a clog to the wheels of industry; a blight on the progress of the country, and the assumption of the confederate debt."

Both houses of Congress are now under the control of the Democrats. Has this resulted in a clog to the wheels of industry? Is there a blight on the progress of the country? Does not the Gazette & Bulletin know that when that "traitorous organization" known as the Democracy, got control of the government, business began to revive, and that now every industry in the country is booming? Of course it does. Democratic "misrule" saved millions of dollars a year to the nation. It put an end to the abuses inaugurated under the Grant administration, and drove from office the thieves who were sapping the life blood of the nation. It brought to punishment the rascals who were feasting on spoils drawn from the pockets of the people. It has brought peace and quiet to the South, and the "bloody shirt" business has come to such a farce that scarcely a reputable journal in the North will any longer repeat the absurd campaign lies of Democratic intimidation in the Southern States. Though there are a quarter of a million more democrats in the United States to-day than Republicans, we are called traitors while they are the loyal people. If to denounce the theft of the Presidency, the trampling on the Constitution and the laws, the keeping in office of known thieves and rascals, the proposition to repeat the abuse of Grant's administration by electing him to a third term, be treason, then make the most of it.

The old cry about paying the confederate bonds is too threadbare to notice. No such proposition has ever been entertained for a moment, and never will be. But we may as well make up our minds to listen to all this nonsense for some months to come. We will no doubt be told that not a drop of Democratic blood was shed in the late war; that the election of a Democratic president will result in another confederacy, &c., &c. But no one will believe what they know to be false and this kind of campaign thunder will be found, when too late, to have fired the hearts of all truly loyal citizens with the determination to wipe from existence a party that has kept itself alive for years on public spoliation, trickery and falsehood, and will result in the election and inauguration of the man whom the Democratic party shall name at Cincinnati for President of the United States.

PRESIDENTIAL CAMPAIGN.

From now until the close of the year, the political cauldron will be boiling. The election of National, State and County officers next fall will be preceded by a hot contest. No American citizen can afford to be without the means of knowing the great issues of the day. Every Democratic voter should do all in his power for the success of the party; and there is no better way to help the party than by sustaining a sound Democratic newspaper.

There is but one such paper in Columbia county, and that is the COLUMBIAN. It is DEMOCRATIC through and through, and was never anything else. For the last forty years this paper, and its predecessors now merged in it, has labored always for the success of the party of honest political principles. In order to increase its influence, and thus strengthen the party, we now ask for the hearty support of all Democrats. Our circulation is the largest in the county, but there are still many good Democrats who should be on our list.

As an inducement to such, we offer the COLUMBIAN from now until after the election for 75 CENTS, hoping thereby to place the paper in the hands of every Democrat in the county. Send in your names and your money, and thus assist us in making a lively and interesting campaign sheet.

We cannot afford to be idle in this campaign. The enemy is on the alert, but by hard work and a liberal distribution of sound Democratic literature, victory will be ours. The great fraud of 1876, in stealing the Presidential chair must not be repeated, and the best way to prevent it is to organize thoroughly, work constantly, and see that every member of the party is well posted on the issues of the campaign.

Barkley moved that B. F. Fruit and W. L. Eyerly be senatorial conferees to meet similar conferees from other counties in the district to select a senatorial delegate to the State convention. Carried unanimously. Mr. Lowenberg thanked the members for their attendance. He said this was the largest meeting that had been held for a long time. Michael Meylert, Esq., of Laporte, was in town on Monday. Mr. Meylert is looking after the nomination for State Senator. He was on his way to Georgia.

The Milton Argus is the name of a new daily paper published by W. H. Smith at that place. The first number presents a very neat appearance. Success to it.

Rt. Rev. M. A. DeWolfe Howe will administer the rite of confirmation in St. Paul's church next Sunday evening. He will visit St. Gabriel's, Sugarloaf, on Monday.

The Sunbury Gazette-American is no more. After one year's trial the proprietors found that one Republican paper in that county did not pay, and so have separated, and the two old papers will be re-established.

Clapp & Co., two dwelling houses and three stables belonging to the firm, and a house owned by Mrs. Sarah Painter were destroyed. The saw mill was saved by hard work.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.—Mr. L. Gross has just returned from the city with an immense stock of Clothing, Hats and Caps, Boots and Shoes, which he is selling at unusually low prices. Give him a call and be convinced. N. Y. Store, Sharpless building.

ANNUAL STATEMENTS.

The law requires that the accounts of townships, boroughs, and poor districts shall be audited on the second Monday of April, and that such annual settlements be published in at least two papers printed in the county. The accounts of school districts are not settled until June.

A failure to comply with the law by not having such accounts published is punishable by a fine for each failure. Township officers should see that the law is obeyed.

For the widest circulation and lowest rates, have your statements published in this paper.

Mrs. L. Wolf's milk wagon met with an accident last Saturday evening on the road beyond Shaffer's bridge. Meeting another wagon Mrs. Wolf turned out on the creek side of the very narrow road, and getting too near the edge, horse, wagon and occupants went over the bank, and down about 15 feet. The wagon was badly damaged, but the horse, and Mrs. Wolf and her son were only frightened. It might have been a very serious matter. That piece of road should be looked after.

Mr. Savidge, the new minister, has moved. We noticed the members gave him a warm reception.

ROHRSBURG NEWS.

ROHRSBURG, April 13, '80

After a long delay "Poor Pen" will again make an appearance.

The farmers are beginning their Spring work, but it seems like winter yet, as it is very windy, and has been for some time.

Dr. Harder, we are sorry to say is in very poor health, but is looking better now.

Miss Gertie Harder and Ella Black will attend the Orangeville Academy the coming term.

It has been rumored that Mrs. Vine Albertson would have a hop again this week. This is an error, but it will take place some time in the near future.

Miss Hannah Patterson will teach a select school here to open on Monday next and continue ten weeks. We wish her the best of success in her new employment.

Mr. Wm. Crawford is building a fence around his garden. This is a step in the right direction, and cabbage leaves are useful sometimes.

T. Mencer and Joe Watts (both shoemakers) have been ill a few days, but both are on the mend now and will resume work again soon.

Amos Heacock is again at work here after a sojourn of a few weeks in Bloom.

Miss Nettie Keller returned from a visit to Mossville a few days since.

Baird's Minstrels are billed to appear in the Opera House Monday evening, the 19th. The troupe consists of excellent performers, including 8 clog dancers and 8 superb solo singers. They are highly spoken of by the press everywhere and should have a good house, as it is seldom our people have the opportunity of attending as good a minstrel entertainment as this company will furnish them.

STILLWATER NEWS

The recent nice weather has changed the condition of the roads very much for the better—teamsters are delighted.

Quite a heavy thunder shower on Lord's day morning of last week—another of the same in the evening accompanied by heavy wind and hail.

Farmers are happy now—the wheat never looked better and more promising at this season, and ploughing for spring crops has begun.

Mrs. Benj. Pealer, we are happy to say, is recovering from her long and painful illness. She lay under the care and treatment of a physician for many months, growing worse all the time until no one had hopes of her recovery. Finally, discharging the doctor and abandoning the use of drugs, under the careful nursing and home treatment of her mother-in-law, Mrs. John Pealer, she began to recover, and is now out of danger.

Two more couple have launched out upon the matrimonial sea—Mr. I. P. Kitchen and Mrs. Martha E. Youngs, both of Sugarloaf township were married by the writer on the first inst., also on the same day by the same, Mr. J. F. Moss and Miss T. B. Holden, both of Benton township.

"Though fools spurn Hymen's gentle powers,
We, who improve his golden hours,
By sweet experience know
That marriage, rightly understood,
Gives to the tender and the good
A paradise below."

And now that the rum-seller is beginning to look around for his dozen of good sober citizens to petition our Honorable Judges to give them permission to continue to make drunkards, impoverish families, destroy homes, wreck the lives and characters of their fellows, disturb the peace and quiet of the community, take men's money and give them in return that which is worse than naught, would it not be well for temperance folks to look after the character and names of those who sign such petitions? The country has a right to know, and with the permission of the editor, I propose to publish the names of some such. Was much pleased with your recent editorial on the liquor law, relative to its violation in this county. The matter needs looking after, and shall be done.

We close this week, with this to "Snibbor:"

"Our wise forefathers, born in sober days,
Resigned to fools the tart and witty phrase.
The motley coat gave warning for the jest,
Excused the wound, and sanctified the pest;
But we from high to low all strive to sneer,
Will all be wits, and not the livery wear."

BERWICK LETTER.

EDS. COLUMBIAN:

Kinney Adams has moved his store into the Jackson block, where his stock shows to greater advantage than it did in the dingy room which he has just vacated.

The "moving" on the 1st of April in town this year strongly resembled the old game of "Pussy wants a corner." Several families are minus a "corner," and are compelled to take to boarding.

The St. Charles Hotel, is now occupied by its owner, Mrs. Wesler, who will no doubt try to make it as pleasant as possible for her guests. Mr. Barton, of Bloomsburg, is at present managing the business.

Mr. Benjamin Hicks, an old and highly respected citizen of this town, died on the 2nd and was buried on the 5th inst. Few larger funerals were ever witnessed here. He was for many years a member of the school board and a class leader in the Methodist church—always, under every circumstance, an exemplary christian.

At the Literary Society last Friday evening, a new corps of officers was elected. The subject debated was, "that the usury laws are unjust." On the affirmative were W. E. Smith and And Freas, on the negative L. Thompson and J. Kurtz. The Judges' decision was in favor of the negative.

REPORTER.

Berwick Pa., April 6, '80.

[The above was received last week but was crowded out. ED.]

EDS. COLUMBIAN:

The fires on the Nescopec mountains presented a grand sight last Friday and Saturday evenings.

The dust rolls in clouds along our streets, powdering hair and clothing of the foot passengers with fiendish delight, apparently.

The fragrant blossoms of the trailing arbutus may now be found in moist and sunny places. The few lovers of wild flowers, here, have already made several excursions into the woods, returning with the early products of spring.

A larger audience than usual was at the meeting of the Literary Society last Friday evening. After an excellent essay by Miss Annie Kurtz on Nihilism, the new officers were inaugurated with very little form. The presidents, retiring, and newly installed, made little appropriate speeches. The value of the Protective Tariff laws was discussed pro and con, the judges deciding in favor of the affirmative.

A small number of friends of Mrs. F. R. Jackson, passed a few hours right pleasantly last Friday evening at her house, agreeably to extended invitations. The music, refreshments etc., were very much enjoyed. A similiar affair took place at Mrs. B. F. Crispin's on Monday night. The guests thoroughly enjoyed the evening, revelling in all the little pleasures comprising the general make-up of social gatherings, from the "tete-a-tete" of a love-sick couple on the stair-way to the boisterous chorus around the piano. Another on a larger scale will take place, to-morrow night at Mr. M. W. Jackson's. R.

ORANGEVILLE ITEMS.

Mr. George W. Hayman has moved with his pleasant family to Millinville where he intends engaging in the saddlery business. Mr. Hayman is an excellent workman and those wishing harness or repairs will do well to patronize him.

Dr. C. W. Ammerman has invented a sand guard for buggy wheels. The shield is simple in its construction, easily adjusted, and will prevent any mud or sand from working in the spindles and wearing out the boxes. Those having good buggies should secure this useful article. The Dr. has secured a patent for his invention.

Miss C. A. McCollum, lately from Plymouth, has opened a new millinery in this place. She brought with her a large assortment of goods, which is to be greatly improved by new arrivals from the city in a few days.

The Spring term of our Academy opened on Monday. From present indications, we can safely say the attendance this term will be unusually large. In our next we will report the number in attendance.

Mr. Parvin Masteller has greatly improved his premises by building a new fence in front of his house.

Some of our merchants have gone to the city to purchase their stock of Spring goods.

The new foundry has commenced work and is running on full time.

The public schools having closed, those of our young men who were off teaching, have returned to their homes.

NETHERLAND.

REMOVAL.

Ralph F. Snyder would respectfully say to his friends and patrons that he has removed his Photograph Gallery to rooms over H. J. Clark & Son's Dry Goods Emporium. This gallery has been thoroughly renovated, light remodeled and all the modern appliances used in photography added, making it the most complete establishment in this section of the State. Call and see him in his new rooms.

TO GRAPE GROWERS—THE SINGLE POLE SYSTEM.

The attention of farmers and fruit growers is called to a new work on Grape Growing, by the above title, which has attracted the attention of horticulturists all over the Union. It is pronounced one of the most practical treatises upon the subject ever written. This manual has been very carefully compiled from a series of lectures upon the subject, dictated by an experience of over forty years in Europe and America. This fact alone will commend it to all, and even the most successful viniculturists will find it stored with new and useful facts. Its author has made grape culture a life study, and only cites from his personal knowledge. He is not a "dry as dust" theorist, but works his own vineyard on the Single pole System to the letter and leaf.

It is extremely simple, and contains no scientific or botanical terms. It is so plain that any man can read this book at home and successfully raise grapes with no attendant expense whatever. With this book, a spade and a jack knife any person owning an acre of land may begin a remunerative business. The agricultural editor of the Iowa State Register says this work is "worth all the guides to Grape Growing he has ever seen." Agents wanted. A specimen copy of this complete manual on grape growing will be sent to any address, prepaid for 50 cents. Trade supplied at a liberal discount by the Western News Company. Address A. HOFFER & SONS, McGregor, Iowa.

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, D. C. April 12th, 1880.

DISTINGUISHED DEFENDANTS, LAWYER BELVA A. LOCKWOOD AS A PROSECUTOR.

The sensations of the past week have been legal rather than legislative. Two very distinguished gentlemen, the Admiral of the Navy and Senator Hill, of Georgia, have appeared before the U. S. District court as defendants. Admiral Porter was charged with diverting money due from the Government to a clerk in his employ, or rather compelling this clerk, through threats of discharging him, to pay the money to the clerk's divorced wife. The plaintiff was non-suited, and will renew his claim in the courts of New York.

The suit against Senator Hill has already become a celebrated case. The plaintiff is a woman suing for seduction and the support of her child. Her lawyer is a woman whom neither the polished paragraphs of the New York Nation, nor the studied contempt of the distinguished counsel who advocated the cause of Mr. Tilden before the Electoral Commission, can suppress. Mrs. Belva A. Lockwood is perhaps the most irrepressible respectable woman of this wicked generation, Mary Walker and Susan B. Anthony not excepted. She is a very thorn in the flesh, and lioness in the paths of masculine frailty. She has no tears for an erring brother's shame. Great Ceasar! what will become of us in this phenomenal civilization? With women at the bar and at the polls, the lords of creation will be no more respectable than the ladies of creation with whom they sin. The tendency is to drive them arm in arm into the demimonde. The stronger vessel will be judged by the same code, moral, legal and social, as the weaker vessel that he tows into troubled, muddy waters. This is confession! But is it not justice?

The heavy, polished, and judicial Nation criticized Mrs. Lockwood because she did not abandon her client when she found there was no money in the case, and when her weak client was disposed to abandon herself, as, the Nation said a male lawyer would have done. And the Nation moralizes and piques itself on the strength of prophecy that it had made: "This is a realization of the condition of things it had predicted woman would bring into politics and into the professions." Alas for the moral, alas for the Nation!

I am not assuming the guilt of Senator Hill; that is a question for the courts to decide, but neither the ability nor respectability of the defendant and his counsel entitle him to a favorable prejudgment by the press before the evidence is all in. If Senator Hill is innocent, it is deplorable that he has been made to suffer; if he is guilty he should meet the consequence like any other man. Meanwhile Washington political society will be prodded into improved circumspection by such suits as this, and political society here can carry a good deal more circumspection without the reproach of austerity and Puritanism.

After the nomination at Cincinnati, there will be, to a far greater extent even than is now the case, a squandering of money by Democrats on trumpery political documents. The mails from this city, New York and other places will go loaded down with speeches, statistics, prophecies and denunciations, all of which will be expected to affect voters. They won't do it. Between June, when the nomination will be made, and November, there is no doubt that eloquent speakers will have their influence by appeals from the stump, but the speeches of those same gentlemen, put in the cold type of a pamphlet, will only kindle the morning fire or be made useful for other non-political purposes in and around the voters' houses. They will not be read. They will be sent by hundreds of tons, but will hardly influence a vote. The Democratic party, to its shame be it said, is far behind the other great party in supporting the only thoroughly effective medium of winning over votes—the newspaper. Yet the newspaper, going daily or weekly throughout the year to the voter's home—not only during the immediate excitement of the campaign, but also in the intervening times when men's minds are undetermined—are left with a half support and money enough squandered in other ways to give us a better Democratic newspaper than is now in possession of either party. I do not advocate the payment of money to political papers for any but legitimate work, but that kind of work, in the course of a year, amounts in most cases to a sum which would astonish any one but a newspaper man.

Of the Presidential probabilities it may be said that in the past week Hancock has made steady gains in the South and Pennsylvania, and that both Governor Seymour and President Tilden have by last apparently well authenticated reports intimated that they would not under any circumstances accept a nomination. Messrs. Thurman and Hendricks, and their friends, are maintaining, as they did from the first, what I suppose may be called a dignified reticence. Of the prominent Republican candidates there seems to be but one—Grant—who has any prospect of the nomination. The actual strength of Senator Blaine—that is, strength that can be made available in the Chicago Convention—seems to be confined to very few States. Sherman, except by the withdrawal of one of the others, seems to be as much out of the fight as a man never thought of in connection with it.

HILTON.

Henry Lear, Patriot, Ohio, writes:

I was taken sick last Wednesday with a very severe Rheumatic pain in my left shoulder; I was so unwell that I could not turn myself around in bed. Having heard of the curative qualities of St. Jacob's Oil, I concluded to try it. The first application brought relief, and on the subsequent day I was able to go to work. I therefore recommend this excellent remedy to all sufferers with Rheumatism.

It should be the aim of every owner of Horses, Cows, &c., to make them as handsome and useful as possible. The German Horse and Cow Powder helps to develop all the powers of the animal. It improves its beauty and increases its usefulness. It makes milk, mucle and fat. By using it a horse will do more work and a cow give more milk and be in better condition with less feed. Sold only by weight at 15 cents a pound by C. A. Kleim, Bloomsburg.

Louisiana for Hancock.

NEW ORLEANS, April 12.—The Democratic State convention to nominate delegates to Cincinnati met this morning. Lieutenant Governor M'Enery was chosen temporary chairman. Resolutions were adopted declaring that the democracy of Louisiana hear with the deepest regret the course of the Democratic members of the United States Senate who have made objections to and placed obstacles in the way of the adoption of the majority report of the committee on privileges and elections in the matter of the illegal and fraudulent claim of W. P. Kellogg, who now occupies a seat in that body justly and legally due to H. M. Spofford. The resolutions further urge upon all Democratic Senators to seat Spofford; thank Senator Jones for the vindication of the claim of Spofford and the right of the State for due and legal representation on the floor of the Senate.

The convention decided to elect four delegates by each congressional district.

A resolution was adopted favoring Gen. Winfield S. Hancock for President, but the delegates go uninstructed except to vote as a majority of them may decide and for the maintenance of the two-thirds rule.

Nebraska Democrats

PRONOUNCING AGAINST THE MONSTROUS REPUBLICAN FRAUDS OF 1876.

The Nebraska Democratic State Convention, passed the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, In the Presidential campaign of 1876 all of the historical Democratic policies of sound finance, home rule and purity of administration were in issue and at stake in the candidacy of Samuel J. Tilden; and whereas, in the Republican frauds by which the country was basely cheated of its wish and robbed of its elected choice, the whole republic was despoiled and our institutions injured; therefore,

Resolved, That the Democratic party of Nebraska pledges itself to ceaseless execration, in pursuit and punishment of all the authors, aiders, abettors, allies, and beneficiaries of that fraud, and promises all its strength to the vidication of the majority rule, which alone can perpetuate our Democratic form of goverment.

Resolved, That recognizing all Democratic leaders as pledged to right the wrong done in the theft of the Presidency, we pledge to our standard bearers our united support in such measures as may again put in issue the great questions of 1876, and as may provide for their most certain vindication against the crime, which, in 1876 and 1877, struck down our elected President, despoiled him of his great office, and deprived the republic of the beneficent results of a Democratic Government and majority rule during the current Presidency.

Democratic Unity.

A report has come from Washington, by way of the Philadelphia Times, that a plan has been proposed, and is likely to be agreed upon, which will bring concord and unity to state, and will prevent any serious conflict or dissension in the coming State convention. The basis of the compromise policy is as follows: The delegation from Philadelphia to the State Convention to be modified so as to embrace a number of Vaux men; the appointment of a city committee composed of one of each faction in every ward a division of the four delegates-at-large to the National Convention and an agreement as to the same before the convention; the entire National delegation to go uninstructed and committed to the unit rule; and that the President of the Convention and the chairman of the State Convention be agreed upon before the Convention meets. While this arrangement if true, may and thus far seems to suit the contending leaders, it will not entirely please the rank and file of the party. There is a decided objection throughout the party generally in this state to the unit rule, as the operations of that system are believed to be pernicious and harmful. We shall regret to see it adopted by the Harrisburg Convention. Harmony within the party, however, is something so much to be desired after the vexatious quarrels and splits, and is so necessary for success, that a basis of agreement with a few objectionable features will be tolerated for the good it can accomplish. The Democratic party of Pennsylvania does not belong to Wallace or Randall, or to any one else, and any effort to make the contrary appear the case is a waste of time and energy very harmful to the main cause. If the party enters into the contest this fall on the principle of honesty and integrity in office, and a wise and economical administration of public affairs, it will reap an easy victory, for the Cameron dynasty is rapidly nearing the end of its reign; but if internal quarrels and bickerings occupy all the attention, to the exclusion of the public good, the hopes of success are vain and foolish.—Jeffersonian.

A Question.

We ask Judge Pearson, if a poor, friendless man had committed a crime, plead guilty, fled from justice till after the term of the court at which he confessed his guilt by a plea of guilty had closed, came back to the jurisdiction, if in that case he, the judge, would have bailed him for his appearance at the next term of the court for sentence?

Then why were the corrupt solicitors treated with such marked leniency? Was it because they gave bail for trial? Then the rich and powerful offenders who can get bail are entitled to one kind of treatment, and the poor and friendless a very different treatment.

Is this justice? Is this the spirit of the law?

The people will be forced to take some prompt action to enforce the laws and maintain the integrity of their execution. These bribery cases afford the best ground for this action.—Commonwealth.

William H. Kemble made his appearance in Harrisburg on Monday accompanied by a detective. He went first to the jail, where Judge Pearson refused to go to renew his bail. Kemble stayed all night at the Lochiel hotel. On Tuesday morning the Judge had a hearing at the jail to ascertain whether Kemble returned voluntarily or under arrest. Apparently satisfied that he was on his way to Harrisburg when arrested, bail was taken in $5,000 by the Judge, for Kemble's appearance on the 26th for sentence.

HOW GIRLS GO TO SLEEP.

We had wandered out under the moonlit larches, and we all talked and laughed at nothing, in that silly, happy way young people have. We told riddles and sung the old college songs till finally sleep with his bright colored mantle of dreams called us, and we retired to what we fondly supposed would be repose. But if you have ever occupied a room with six girls, you will know that sleep is not always to be obtained at once. One young lady was an hour and a half by the clock in brushing and braiding her hair, in putting up her crimps, in cleaning and polishing her finger nails, in running a piece of silk floss between each pair of her thirty-two teeth, in polishing each one with a little stick and some powder, in giving them a vigorous brushing with soap and water, in washing her hands and in applying glycerine to them, in putting on a wash good for the complexion, in reading her Bible, in kissing everybody good night, and in getting into her hammock, which everybody who has ever tried it knows is a work of time.

Just as we thought we were almost asleep she recollected that she had not taken her [illegible], and she argued a long time with another young lady to try to get her to take [illegible] quoting at great length from Dr. Palre and other eminent [illegible] physicians to prove that she [illegible] needed [illegible] occasionally. When, [illegible] the poor girl swallowed the globules we thought that we had earned repose; but then another young woman remarked in a cheerful tone that she was cold and one of the windows must come down. This occasioned what seemed to the sleepy ones an endless controversy, as somebody else [illegible] burning up with heat and wanted another opened. This was finally settled. Every one was quiet for at least five minutes, and we were all at length giving up to tired nature's sweet restorer when suddenly an awful sound was heard. A great weight fell suddenly on the bare floor, the shrill shriek of a woman [illegible] upon the midnight air, quick questions and exclamations were heard. A light was struck, and it was discovered not that [illegible] and murderers were upon us, but that somebody's hammock had broken down. This was reconstructed, and again we addressed ourselves to persuade Morpheus to knit up our sleeves of care, which by this time was very much raveled indeed.

Ten minutes of utter quiet passed away; nothing was heard but the gentle breathing of the sleepers, when one affectionate girl, turning over, called out, "Well, I'm going to sleep; good night everybody."—Lippincott's Magazine.

ATMOSPHERIC PRESSURE IN RAISING COAL.

The history of atmospheric railways is on the whole a record of a failure and it would appear that the system can hardly compete with that of the locomotive engine unless in very exceptional circumstances. Their principle, however, seems to have been applied recently with success to the raising of coal at one of the coal pits of Epinac, in France, named the Hottenguer Pit, by M. Blanchet, engineer. His system is described in the Annales des Mines, and its principal organ is a metallic tube freely suspended in the shaft, like a pump column, and containing an upper and a lower piston, rigidly connected with an intermediate cage holding a vertical series or train of trucks nine in number. The tube communicates below with the atmosphere, taking in air or letting it escape, while above it is connected with an air-pump, but can also be made to communicate with exterior air by means of orifices which can be opened or closed at will. When the train is to ascend the air is exhausted above, and free air, entering below, forces the cage up. Descent is effected by admitting air above, that which has entered below being then forced out. Doors, tap pets, registers, stop cocks, &c., are provided, so that empty or full wagons can be introduced or withdrawn as required. There are also barometers, bells, counters, and chronometers indicating where the train is, either in ascent or descent. The system may be applied with two tubes instead of one; in this case the tubes are connected, and a full train rises in one, while an empty train descends in the other; air passes constantly above from one tube to the other. The velocity is mathematically regulated by the volume of air admitted above the piston in descent and by that withdrawn in ascent. According as the air which forces the train up is drawn from a fresh or warm current, it is driven into the pit or out of it by the descending train. With these general features a special advantage of the system should be noted. By means of the powerful air pump such depression can be produced in the pit, closed in the absence of the workmen, that the fire damp is dislodged from the spaces where it lurks, and the vitiated air is then replaced with fresh. Though this greatly reduces the danger from fire-damp, the usual precautions are attended to. This atmospheric system is stated by M. Blanchet to realize an economy of 70 kilogrammes of coal per ton raised, and consequently, of over 315f. for a daily extraction of 450 tons. In the year, counting 280 working days, this gives a total economy of 88,200f. without counting that resulting from the suppression of cables.

Dr. Browning, a regular graduate of one of the oldest and best medical colleges of the United States, has for years been studying the subject of coughs, colds and all troubles of that nature, and is satisfied that he has by diligent research into chemistry and pharmacy found out the true combinations of medicine that will the most quickly and satisfactorily cure the most acute or chronic cases. His C. & C. Cordial is the secret, and it is now effecting cures that are really astonishing. One trial will convince you that it will eventually become indispensable to any family. OR

ARGOSY BRACE.

Some Reasons why these Suspenders are better than others.

1st. They contain no rubber.

2d. They will wear longer than any other suspenders.

Literary Revolution and UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE

An Encyclopedia in 20 VOLS., over 16,000 pages; 10 per cent more matter than any Encyclopedia ever before published in this country, and sold, handsomely and well bound, in cloth for $10, in half morocco for $15, and printed on fine heavy paper, wide margins, bound in half Russia, gilt top, [illegible] so extraordinary that its success, beyond all precedent in book publishing, may be fairly claimed to inaugurate a Literary Revolution.

THE LIBRARY OF UNIVERSAL KNOWLEDGE is a reprint entire of the last (1879) Edinburgh edition of "Chambers's Encyclopedia," with about 40 per per cent of new matter added, upon topics of special interest to American readers, thus making it equal in character to any similar work, better than any other suited to the wants of the great majority who consult works of reference, and altogether the latest Encyclopedia in the field.

Specimen Volumes in either style [illegible], with privilege of return on receipt of proportionate price per volume.

Special Discounts to all early subscribers, and extra discounts to clubs. Full particulars with descriptive catalogue of many other standard works equally low in price, sent free.

Leading principles of the American Book Exchange.

I. Publish only books of real value.

II. Work upon the basis of present cost of making books, about one-half what it was a few years ago.

III. Sell to buyers direct, and save them the 50 to 60 per cent. commission commonly allowed to dealers.

IV. The cost of books when made 10,000 at a time is but a fraction of the cost when made 500 at a time—adopt the low price and sell the large quantity.

V. Use good type, paper, etc., do careful printing, and strong, neat binding, but avoid all "padding," fat and heavily-leaded type, spongy paper and gaudy binding, which are so commonly resorted to to make books appear large and fine, and which greatly add to their cost, but do not add to their value.

VI. To make $1 and a friend is better than to make $5 and an enemy.
